The Foster Program is an important and life-saving alternative to shelter life for specifically selected pets. Pets selected for foster care generally fit into these broad categories:

- Medical – recovering animals with injuries or illnesses requiring attentive and personalized care
- Behavior – pets with mild behavioral issues, such as unsociability, barrier frustration, shyness, or excitability, who require behavior modification
- Puppies and kittens – pets who are too young to safely live in the shelter.
- Postnatal – mothers and/or unweaned babies may require bottle feeding and gentle care
